Mercury names new director of trade compliance

Scott Hanold, an 11-year employee at Mercury Marine, to head trade compliance division

12/18/12

Scott Hanold has been named director of trade compliance at Mercury Marine. Hanold has worked for Mercury for 11 years.

"Scott has a deep understanding of Mercury Marine's global supply chain," says Steve Cramer, vice president and chief financial officer, in a statement. "Along with his Lean Six Sigma process expertise, his skills and experience are ideal for this important role."

Hanold started as a budget and forecast manager at MerCruiser’s facility in Stillwater, Oklahoma. In 2010, he transferred to Fond du Lac, Wisconsin as a Lean Six Sigma Black Belt for Mercury’s supply chain organisation. Most recently, he served in an interim management role for trade compliance.